

PROJECT DEVELOPMENT PROCESS

Project Status:

A standard roadway improvement project can take up to ten years to complete – from early planning and environmental compliance through final design and construction. The proposed improvements on Russell Street and South 3rd Street in Missoula have been progressing through the planning and environmental stages.

Once the environmental process is completed, the project would proceed through the design and right-of-way phases, and on to construction. At this point, the earliest that any construction would occur in either corridor would be around 2012 or 2013, and would likely begin with the reconstruction of the Russell Street Bridge immediately south of Broadway.

Keep checking in on this web page for periodic updates on the progress of the project.
